

Cast In Order Of Appearance:

Interviewer
Nutritionist

SFX: opening theme

INTERVIEWER : Today we are talking to Spook Thump, a nutritionist for many of the area caves. Just how do you go about determining what we can eat?

NUTRITIONIST : I usually go up a tree or hang over a ledge and then drop the potential food on someone else's head.

INTERVIEWER : You mean you hit things that you think are food on someone else's head?

NUTRITIONIST : Of course, silly. How else can I be objective?

INTERVIEWER : I see. Yes, that does make sense, I suppose. What other methods do you use?

NUTRITIONIST : Well, many times I blow real hard on something to see if it will move, or fly away.

INTERVIEWER : Fly like a bird?

NUTRITIONIST : No, silly, like a spore or a seed because the next test is smelling. I don't want to sniff something and have part of it go flying up my nose, you know.

INTERVIEWER : Yes, yes, perfectly understandable. When do you actually get around to eating it?

NUTRITIONIST : First I feed the so-called food to the Giant Armadillo.

INTERVIEWER : The Giant Armadillo?

NUTRITIONIST : Yes, the Giant Armadillo that I keep in my cave. He's very good at eating things and then vomiting. That way I can check if the food digests well or not. You see, in the beginning of my career, I discovered many things that I thought we should be able to eat, but we can't.

INTERVIEWER : Like what?

NUTRITIONIST : Well, like rocks, for instance. It didn't matter if I stewed them, baked them, boiled them or marinated them before grilling - the Giant Armadillo threw them all up and not one rock was ever digested.

INTERVIEWER : How could you be sure?

NUTRITIONIST : Because not all the rocks came out of just one end of the Giant Armadillo.

INTERVIEWER : I see. Oh...OH! Anyway, what has been the most surprising discovery you've ever made?

NUTRITIONIST : Nuts.

INTERVIEWER : Excuse me? Nuts? What are nuts?

NUTRITIONIST : Nuts look and feel like little rocks but they have stuff inside that's very tasty. Two weeks ago, a chef from the Nether Cave found some under a tree. Inside the cave he started throwing them against the cavewall for fun. Some of them broke open and some of them stuck. We call them 'walnuts'.

SFX: closing theme

INTERVIEWER : That is fascinating. Thank you. This is Pookah Too for the CCC - Continuous Caveman Coverage.